

Whatever brings us individually to space2grow, once there we become part of a special community with a shared set of values.

Kindness

Arriving at the acre with kindness in mind. Kindness, to ourselves and others, allowing us to deal with our own struggles and become more tolerant of others experiencing their own personal struggles and holding no judgement of others.

Respect

Respect for ourselves, each other and nature. Treating everyone at space2grow with respect means allowing people space if they need it or by simply listening. It's all about considering other people's needs as well as our own.

Community

Always keep in mind you are part of a community made up of different groups using the space. Working together, discussions, coming up with ideas or just sitting down together for a tea break all help build a strong community.

Tidiness

One way we can show respect for others and for nature is being tidy and leaving a space we have worked in ready for another group to use. This includes cleaning and putting away tools, emptying wheelbarrows and generally tidying up after ourselves. Leave any space you work in how you would like to find it.

Communication

Whether it's chatting to new people or discussing a project idea communication is always important. Speak to your group leader or a trustee with any ideas or concerns you may have. It's always good to talk.

Recycle, reuse and sustainability

We'd like to make space2grow as sustainable as possible. From conserving water to reusing pots, wood and more from our salvage yard and using natural, sustainable items whenever we can. Let's work together to limit our footprint.
